Technocracy: end of line

by Jordan Peterson

The deadline is approaching. Walt Fryers, the 71 year only proprietor of Technocracy, Inc., will have to vacate his HUB Mall office at the end of the month because, according to HUB Mall officials, Technocracy is not a retail or service operation.

But Fryers is fighting back.

Technocracy is classified as a business by the City Business Tax Assessors, and has a City Business Licence. The organization has paid commercial insurance rates and monthly membership dues to the HUB Merchants Association for five years.

Recently, in response to the charge of non-commerciality levied against him by HUB, Fryers has applied for and been granted a city business licence to retail additional lines of specialty books related to science and technology. He plans also to extend his hours of operation to include weekday evenings, for the convenience of students and the public.

According to the Penguin English Dictionary, a "retail" operation is one that "sells goods in small quantities to the actual consumer." According to this definition, Technocracy, Inc. qualifies as a retail operation. Mr. Fryers states that, although HUB has never collected a percentage of his sales in the past (they collect from other businesses) he is perfectly willing to allow them to do so in the future.

When asked whether Technocracy's increasing retail sales would affect the eviction, Ann Belick of HUB Commercial said, 'I do not think the University has changed its mind.'

Walt Fryers is an elderly man who has invested six and a half years of his life and a sizable amount of money (over $100,000 - according to him) in Technocracy - a non profit, research and education oriented organization with a long and honourable history. He also has the support of various faculty members on campus, has expanded his retail operations and otherwise shown his willingness to adapt to HUB's rules - including giving up a percentage of his unit's earnings. His operation is by definition retail, although its primary focus is elsewhere.

The question remains: Why does HUB want him evicted?

HUB Mall evicts Technocracy

By Mark Roppel
Technocracy Inc. will be evicted from HUB mall at the end of this month.

The mall has not renewed Technocracy's lease," said J.C. Malone, manager of the University Bookstore.

It's not that the Technocrat's are bad tenants, it's just that they don't sell anything.

HUB Commercial has adopted a new policy for leasing in the mall. According to Technocracy's eviction notice dated June 29, "Space is no longer being leased for purposes other than retail and services."

Technocracy is a non-profit membership organization "devoted to education and research," says Walt Fryers, treasurer of the Edmonton chapter.

"I can sympathize with and even approve of this policy in a forward sense for new tenants - but I object to it being made retroactive," says Fryers. "We've been here six and one half years and I would say we've invested close to $100,000 in anticipation of future interest and participation. We're in the early part of an accelerating growth curve; we're being denied a chance to collect here."

The policy is an effort to return the mall to its original conception as a commercial retail and services outlet," says Malone. Fryers thinks it might have something to do with the fact that HUB Commercial collects a percentage of the gross from the businesses in the mall.

"We went to the manager of Hub, then Gail Brown (the Director of Housing and Food Services), then the Vice-President of Facilities and Services," said Fryers, "they all confirmed our eviction notice."

On July 27, Technocracy submitted an appeal to the Board of Governors. But the Board's Administrative Director merely Technocracy then decided to take the matter directly to University President Myer Horowitz.

On August 29, Fryers wrote a letter to Horowitz asking him to ensure that the Board of Governors heard the case.

Horowitz wrote back the next day: "Administrative decisions are not reviewed by the Board." But on August 31, he wrote another letter promising to "examine carefully the file." Horowitz said he has just written a third letter, but he had "no further comment today."

In the meantime, Fryers has been lobbying faculty members, "about half a dozen will support us." But he is not overly optimistic, "I expect we will lose this battle."

"I'm seventy years old," says Fryers, "if we're kicked out of here I don't think I'll set up anywhere else."

Technocracy: Is the dream workable?

by Mark Roppel

H.G. Wells said Technocracy was "a soundly scientific effort to restate economics on a purely physical basis."

The Oxford Dictionary defines it as an "organization and management of a country's industrial resources by technical experts for the good of the whole community."

According to the Technocrats themselves, it is the only alternative to the collapse of society and - or a nuclear war.

In the winter of 1918-1919, an engineer named Howard Scott recruited a group of other engineers and scientists to form a research organization called the Technical Alliance.

By 1930 the group had become known as Technocracy. In 1933 it was incorporated as a non-profit, non-political, non-sectarian membership organization.

After much research, Technocracy concluded that North American society is becoming progressively more unstable as a result of increasingly efficient high technology.

in Canada and the US we have the potential to produce more than we can possibly use.

"There has developed a potential for abundant goods and services," says Walt Fryers, treasurer of the Edmonton chapter of Technocracy. Fryer cites marketing boards which impose quotas on farmers and factories which operate well below capacity as evidence.

The price system and the economy presently operates are designed for scarcity and are totally inappropriate to an economy of abundance.

"Scarcity societies have to work hard," says Fryer. "In our society it is mechanical energy that makes the wheels go round."

Technocracy estimates that people would only have to work sixteen hours a week with 78 days of holiday each year.

Our present system of monetary reward does nothing but guarantee that inefficiency (men doing things that machines could do better) and inequality (there won't be enough for everyone) will flourish.

"Abundance destroys value," says Fryers, "money is more of a stick than a carrot."

Technocracy proposes that everyone be allocated an equal amount of energy each month. For accounting purposes, everyone would have a debit card, much like Visa or Mastercard.

Unlike money, the value of an energy debit would not be subject to fluctuation. Furthermore, you can't steal, lose or hoard an energy debit: no one could become richer than anyone else.

Fryer maintains, "The amount of energy is known." Its distribution could be controlled centrally. There would be no real government, only technicians who would be promoted much the way industry promotes technicians today.

In a technocratic society there would be no crime, poverty or war. These things are spawned by the price system.

Unfortunately, this Brave New World can not be global. Only North America has reached the stage where it could sustain an economy of abundance. But even here, it will take time.

"It is a long-term thing," says Fryers. "We are not trying to implement it, we are just researching."

Technocracy objects

This is a response to "Don Quixote" Marples column of 6 Nov.

You have certainly earned a place in my scrap book of calumnious and ignorant diatribes. You not only distort and misrepresent your subject —

Technocracy — you also degrade and demean yourself as a graduate student, as well as the Gateway and the University. Sheltering behind the licence allowed student writers you wield your poison pen with irresponsible abandon.

My association with Technocracy and Howard Scott (who died on 1 January, 1970) dates from 1936. I believe I have quite a comprehensive understanding of the subject and the man. Your sources, whatever they may be, are grotesque distortions and apparently vindictively motivated. The body of thought that is Technocracy is thus buried in a mass of personal attacks and lost to view amid the overburden of malignant and emotional garbage.

Strange that you should take the trouble to compile a column of lies and half-truths when you could have researched the subject right here on campus at the Technocracy office in HUB or in the University Library.

What can be your motivation? Do you favor burning books and suppressing freedom of expression other than your own? Do you attack from the 'right' or the 'left'? Are you communist or fascist? It is hard to tell. You do not say. By your techniques you could be either.

In any case, attacks such as yours, or a defence such as mine, are unlikely to have any significant effect on the course of events which will determine whether there is a Technocracy in America's future. We regard it as a natural consequence of increasing energy conversion in a highly industrialized society of continental magnitude, such as we have here in North America.

In the meantime students will continue, no doubt, to make their own judgements on Technocracy as an appropriate technique for future social operations on this continent.

Scurrilous Article (David Marples in Gateway of 6 Nov 79)

1. Following receipt of your letter of 17 Nov. approving of our response to the Marples' column of 6 Nov., we submitted it to the Gateway the same day, at noon of Nov. 21st. It was immediately accepted and published in the issue of Nov. 22nd. A copy of the paper is enclosed, together with a Xerox layout of the item of interest.
2. We have not met Marples as yet, but suspect he was a visitor to our booth at last Friday's Flea Market. If it was him, (and he would not give his name,) he made a very persistent attack on our use of Kilogram Calories as a measure of energy consumption. He insisted the correct usage would be 'joules' and that Kg.Cal. meant nothing. He finally yielded somewhat when we stood on the definition of calorie and Calorie. Eventually he left and took a copy of "Technocracy: Technological Social Design" with him.
3. I doubt if we have heard the last from Mr. Marples. If there is a follow-up we will keep you in the picture.

3. Co-incidentally we have been allowed back to have a booth at the Friday Flea Market in Students' Union Bldg. It costs us $5.00 until we have a registered student club. Three of us manned it last Friday and gained some casual response in spite of the Gateway item.
4. We are also running a very small classified ad in the Gateway, see page 15. It costs $1.50 per issue, and is about all we can afford as yet. It apparently did not give us any protection from feature writers.
5. I spoke to the editor, Gordon Turtle, a rather 'hippie' type of person, regarding getting some feature coverage. He seemed favorable. That was before the Marples' column. However the Gateway is commencing a Science Page which we may be able to use, as they suggest "Persons wishing to write on any aspect of science and society are welcome to contribute." Two free lance writers for the Gateway have approached us and taken literature, but without results so far. I would like to try it myself, but lately it seems there is not enough time to handle routine, let alone original work.

Quixote

by David Marples

At the north end of HUB, one will frequently encounter two well-dressed gentlemen sitting at a table, which is adorned with posters, proclaiming the virtues of Technocracy Inc. Nearby, a small office, the windows of which resemble a bulletin board, serves as the headquarters of the Technocrats. Despite the apparent intensity of the campaign, it is doubtful whether more than a handful of the students who walk down HUB have any idea what Technocracy stands for, let alone know the identity of its poker-faced advocates who propound their odd philosophy to any who might care to listen.

Technocracy originated after the First World War, which led to an interest in the benefits of a planned economy. Its founder was an American engineer named Howard Scott, who, in 1919, organized a Technical Alliance, founded on the dubious premise that only engineers could provide the solution to the problems of an industrial society. A second, but no less important opinion of Scott was that production could be regulated in terms of energy expenditure, rather than by using the price system. The latter was seen as the root cause of the 1929 economic crisis.

Born in Virginia in 1890, Scott was a huge and unpleasant figure. A fellow engineer commented that "he was too much like Hitler to be a good leader". He nonetheless refused to be anything other than leader. Lacking in any kind of tact, this arrogant gun-arrying figure made it his personal mission to develop a society run by those with "knowledge of operation and direction", that is by technocrats. In 1932, he and Walter Rautenstrauch, head of the Department of Industrial Engineering at Columbia University, formed a Committee on Technocracy, which conducted an "Energy Survey of North America".

The committee however lasted less than a year. Rautenstrauch soon recognized the anti-democratic nature of Scott's proposal to hand over control of America to a group of engineers. After a disastrous radio interview by Scott, the Technocrats were formally censured by the American Engineering Council and roundly condemned by the press. In January 1933, Scott and his associates were discredited and largely friendless. Why then, one asks, has Technocracy Inc. survived to the present-day? Why do members of this organization sit in HUB handing out literature inspired by this very same Howard Scott?

Technocracy Inc. purports to provide a solution to the problems of North America today. The Technocrats see themselves as the only people capable of providing this solution, by means of their scientific knowledge. They seek an end to democracy (indeed one of their leaflets bears the headline "The Statue of Liberty — it's time to tear it down"), the deportation of all recent immigrants and the return of all U.S. troops from abroad so that they might guard the borders against foreign intrusions. The aim is to mobilize the population to develop natural resources for the benefit of North American citizens.

If one disregards the sheer inhumanity of the proposed order of deportation, two points strike one immediately. First, Technocracy Inc. advocates a policy of "survival of the fittest", perhaps a hangover from the Thirties and Nazi influence. The suggestion is that North America, the richest continent in the world, should protect her resources like a bear sheltering her cubs, whilst the countries of the Third World are left to the wolves. Thus the rich of the world get richer and the poor presumably die off as nature takes its course.

Secondly, the assumption that Technocrats alone have the knowledge to lead countries is facile. Given that Technocracy Inc. is disillusioned with the rule of politicians, it nevertheless provides no proposals as to how the Technocrats are to take power. Are we to imagine that Congress and the Commons will simply stand aside, mesmerized by the breath-taking logic emanating from Scott's sheep-like followers? Future visitors to the hallowed office in HUB might ask one further question: should science, as a fallible discipline, not be used to serve the people, or should we be harnessed to its yoke, the prisoners of faceless technocrats such as Howard Scott?

Organization Meeting for a
TECHNOCRACY CLUB

8 p.m., Tuesday, 7 Nov. 1978
Room 270A, SUB, U of A

To take a hand in your future, you must first know the problem. Technocracy is a learning experience. It is science in the social field.

Speaker John Taub of San Francisco will be on hand to answer your questions.

Technocracy is a non-political, non-sectarian, and non-profit membership organization.

Everyone welcome. Admission free.

editorial ⁷⁵⁻¹ ¹⁹⁷¹

Those of you who were fortunate, or unfortunate enough (depending on your views of student politics) to attend last year's student election forum in Turtle lecture theatre (an administrative screwup by the Zoeteman people forcing the forum into the 500 seat lecture theatre rather than the 1000 seat SUB Theatre) witnessed one of the strangest election campaigns in the history of U of A politics. Star of the show was one Rene Le Larke leading an entourage of equally strange candidates of the Conceptual Reality Alternative Party (CRAP). Their platform was never defined — the strong point and paradoxically the downfall of the campaign — but it generally followed the entropic pattern of the theatre of the absurd: outlandish costumes, a speech in Lithuanian punctuated exclamatically with cries of anarchy, freedom, autonomy; an ostensibly drunken speech by a darkskinned candidate, Milfred Campbell, advocating full implementation of the now famous Hohol two-tier foreign student fee structure, a refusal by Le Larke to leave the stage after the allotted five minutes for speech-making, followed by Le Larke's request that the 500 students vote on whether or not he should continue to speak, which democratically allowed him to continue, whereupon the masked politico attempted a move to more serious campaigning directed at promising to uphold the university's autonomy in the face of the provincial government's obvious desire to seize the power now invested in the university itself; the list goes on ...

Whereas the Spark, Reynolds and Young Socialist slates had been preparing for several months, CRAP was formulated only four weeks before the polls opened. The campaign was conceived as a farce and executed as a farce. It sought to appeal to jaded students in their last year who had suffered three or four years of uncompromised wishy-washiness on the part of previous S.U. executives, or to younger students who had perceived, perhaps from observing the general trend in Government, Business, and Labour towards a centralized, concretely defined, decision making policy inevitably top heavy with bureaucratic compartmentalization and reams of reports and task force recommendations, the ineffectiveness and hence the farcical nature of student politics in the seventies. The CRAP slate recognized the farce and didn't pull any punches so far as their intentions were concerned.

During the last week of campaigning CRAP fever spread across campus like shit from the fan in god's anteroom. Suddenly everyone, including the CRAP candidates, were discussing the possibility of the slate actually winning. Yes winning!

And they did do remarkably well. Rene Le Larke lost by a handful of votes. Jay Spark, who Le Larke had called "Zoeteman's protege," pocketed only 20 per cent more votes than the madman Rene. In the more serious faction of politicians, serious meaning conservative, a windy Whew! ruffled finalized, procedurally expedient documents from the desks of the enterprising young paperpushers.

Rene Le Larke is now disguised as Manfred Lukat and warming the seat of vp. services on the Spark executive.

Lukat joined the S.U. executive just five days before the decision to lockout CUPE 1368. He voted with the rest of the executive, dressed by a new c.a. for Reed International, demonstrating the chameleon presence in his DNA, quick to camouflage him and ensure his survival in the branch of corporate politics.

But wait; there are rumors that Lukat has said he had no choice in the CUPE matter, that he was not officially ratified to vp. services until July 17 and yet was given full voting privileges July 2. Shall we allow Pynchon paranoia to intervene?

Could it be? As the rumor Lukat does not deny has it that Spark and Lukat were in cahoots long before CRAP was formed? And that CRAP was formed as the integral unit of an ingenious conspiracy to assure Spark's victory by appealing to voters who otherwise would have chosen Reynolds, initially felt to be Spark's closest rival? That the CRAP candidates were victims of their own cynicism, pawns set up for the Big Con? That the marriage-engagement of vp. services-elect, Shirley Armstrong, to outgoing Zoeteman vp. services, Jan Grude, which thereby created the vp. services vacancy now filled by Lukat was part of the plot which ensured Lukat his payment for services rendered and hence raises suspicions of a Spark/Zoeteman connection with god knows what other avenues of power somehow mixed up in the intrigue? That the move to Turtle lecture theatre was ultimately a last minute decision forced into being because had SUB Theatre been used another 400-500 people would have gone home saying, "Hey, maybe there is something to CRAP?" And those people spelling political doom for Jay's hopes for victory, would have left Lukat in the uncomfortable position of full responsibility for the 23,000 students on campus?

Ah, but this is pure speculation, conjecture, crap.

We look into the events of the coming year with interest and expect to see Mr. Lukat in many costumes. The only question is: are they kept in Mr. Spark's closet?

¹³⁵⁻¹ ¹⁹⁷¹ Technocratic Realism

One phrase of your initial editorial in The Gateway of 7th September is worthy of rescue from oblivion. You mention: "the farcical nature of student politics in the seventies." Of course you only said it because it's true.

The sixties, as we all remember, was an era of student activism, protest and radicalism in a vain attempt to amend the status quo. The sound and the fury have all passed away.

So what's for the eighties? Let me guess.

In climactic frustration with a Price System that does not work, students will try Realism. Increasingly they will expect and demand a social system that will produce results commensurate with the physical capacities of America; an objective design for a technological age; the full potential of science to provide an age of abundance and a full life for all citizens of North America — a Technocracy.

You could start now. And here. Why not?

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry must be clearly documented, including the date, amount, and purpose of the transaction. This ensures transparency and allows for easy reconciliation of accounts.

2. The second part of the document outlines the procedures for handling incoming payments. It states that all payments must be received in full and that any partial payments should be clearly marked as such. The document also mentions that payments should be deposited into the designated bank account as soon as possible.

3. The third part of the document describes the process for issuing invoices. It requires that invoices be sent out promptly after the completion of a service or the delivery of goods. The document also specifies that invoices should be clearly labeled and include all necessary details, such as the customer's name, address, and the items being billed.

4. The fourth part of the document discusses the importance of regular audits. It states that the accounts should be reviewed on a monthly basis to ensure that all transactions have been properly recorded and that there are no discrepancies. Any issues identified during the audit should be addressed immediately.

5. The fifth part of the document provides information about the company's financial goals and objectives. It states that the company aims to maintain a healthy cash flow and to grow its revenue over time. The document also mentions that the company is committed to providing excellent customer service and to maintaining high standards of quality.

6. The sixth part of the document discusses the company's policies regarding employee compensation and benefits. It states that employees are paid on a regular basis and that the company provides a comprehensive benefits package, including health insurance and a retirement plan. The document also mentions that the company is committed to providing a safe and healthy work environment for all employees.

7. The seventh part of the document provides information about the company's contact information and how to reach the management team. It states that the company can be reached by phone, email, or in person. The document also mentions that the company is open for business from 9 AM to 5 PM, Monday through Friday.

8. The eighth part of the document discusses the company's commitment to environmental sustainability. It states that the company is committed to reducing its carbon footprint and to using sustainable materials in its products. The document also mentions that the company is committed to supporting local communities and to promoting social responsibility.

9. The ninth part of the document provides information about the company's future plans and goals. It states that the company is planning to expand its operations into new markets and to develop new products. The document also mentions that the company is committed to staying up-to-date with the latest industry trends and to providing its customers with the best possible service.

10. The tenth part of the document is a concluding statement that expresses the company's appreciation for its customers and its commitment to providing excellent service. It states that the company is grateful for the support of its customers and that it is committed to continuing to provide high-quality products and services.

Students' Union, University of Alberta,
Attention: Sharon Bell, Vice-Pres. Internal Affairs,
Edmonton, Alta.

Sirs:

On behalf of this organization, I wish to apply for authorization to rent space for a literature display at the Flea Market each Friday.

Technocracy Inc. is a non-profit, non-sectarian, non-political organization directed towards research and education. Briefly, it may be regarded as 'Science in the Social Field'. Literature outlining this body of thought will be provided on request.

It is important, we think, at this time, to make this material accessible and visible to the public and particularly to the student body.

Yours sincerely,

Walt Fryers.

Dear Mr. Fryers:

Further to our meeting last Friday, please find enclosed the two memoranda concerning policy for the Friday Flea Market in the Students' Union Building.

As I have explained, your organization is subject to classification as an "outside group," for despite your personal status as a registered student, it is the organization you are representing in this matter and it is therefore the status of the organization which dictates your eligibility. Further to this point, the organization is not eligible in as much as it operates from an office in HUB, this constituting an "operation of an outlet within Edmonton, [(D) 2. of 19 October 1978 memo]

I hope this clarifies the situation for you and your organization. However, please contact me if you have further questions or concerns.

Sincerely,

Kaysi Eastlick
Vice-President Internal Affairs

MEMORANDUM

TO: All persons using Craft Market Tables
FROM: S. KOSTAMO
RE: CRAFT MARKET

1. There will be NO CRAFT MARKET ON DECEMBER 8th/78 as the Arts & Crafts Dept will be holding their Christmas Sale. Also December the 15th will be the last Friday for this year for our Craft Market.
2. Also in the previous memo regarding our new rules and regulations when we mention "HOME-MADE AND HANDCRAFTED ITEMS" we meant Home-made and handcrafted in your own home and by the person selling the items. We do not want articles that are handcrafted in some other part of the world and imported to sell at this Craft market. We want to promote Alberta made products as well as make this Craft market a place where people can pick up handcrafted items.
3. Again I will emphasize the fact that NO OUTSIDE RETAIL INTERESTS WHO OPERATE AN OUTLET FOR THEIR ORGANIZATION ELSEWHERE IN THE CITY may book a craft table at any time.

MEMORANDUM

New guidelines have now been set by the Vice-President Internal Affairs which will govern the use of the Flea Market Tables effective immediately.

The "guidelines" are listed below:

- A. Table Allocation -- generally 7 tables will be held for outside interest and 13 for students and student groups.
In order to ensure first consideration, student groups may book from Friday to Wednesday. Thursday at 0900 hours, the outside interests may book by TELEPHONE. (432-4271)
- B. People -- in order of priority for consideration, should conflict arise:
 - 1. Students -- (i) student groups
(ii) individuals
 - 2. Outsiders (i) public service organizations
(ii) groups and individuals
- C. Use of tables
 - 1. Display purposes only
 - 2. Display, promotion, and sales
 - 3. Sales (HANDCRAFTED AND HOME-MADE ITEMS ONLY)
- D. Exclusions:
 - 1. NO MANUFACTURED ITEMS MAY BE OFFERED FOR SALE.
 - 2. NO OUTSIDE RETAIL INTERESTS WHO OPERATE AN OUTLET FOR THEIR ORGANIZATION ELSEWHERE IN THE CITY.
 - 3. NO HOME-BAKED GOODS TO BE SOLD BY OUTSIDE INDIVIDUAL RETAIL PEOPLE.
(Public service excepted if for organization fund-raising.)

Student groups may set up booths Monday to Thursday in addition to the Friday Flea Market.

If you have any questions please see me or Kaysi Eastlick 432-4236 Room 259 S.U.B.

Mr. Art Gorham,
 Special Events Office,
 Students Union Bldg.,
 University of Alberta,
 Edmonton, Alta.

Dear Art:

To follow-up our conversation of July 18th, we submit herewith the preliminary budget for a visiting speaker on Technocracy, planned for this Fall session (October or early November).

The selected speaker in this case is (tentatively) Mr. John Taube of Rohnert Park, California (Los Angeles). In this case the estimated expenses would be:

Travelling expenses (Air fare, Los Angeles - Edmonton, return).....	$270.00
Room and meals for 3 days in Edmonton.....	$150.00
Advertising.....	$150.00
Rent of meeting hall (Meditation Room).....	0
Honorarium.....	$100.00.

The assistance of the Students Union with any part of these expenses will be greatly appreciated. The support provided last year was extremely helpful. You will remember perhaps that the SU provided an honorarium of $100.00, a free room for the meeting (the Meditation Room), and half-price advertising in the Gateway (to the extent of $40.00).

Present plans include speaking engagements on this campus only.

Yours truly,

Walt Fryers,
 for 11553-A Technocracy Inc.

*25 Sep 78 - Mr. Gorham's office has no funds this year due to cut-backs. In any case only registered students organizations have any claim to support.
